From kiosk to verified invoice in three steps.

The timesheet is gone. The kiosk is the record — and because the clock record and the invoice come from the same system, an agency invoice is no longer a claim to be checked. It is a report of hours your own home already approved.

Kiosk · staff select their name and clock in

Confirmed | Clocked in | Clocked out

1 Clocked in

AGENCY STAFF · AT THE HOME

Staff clock in and out on a locked-down tablet at the shift station. Each event is timestamped to the minute, tied to a named person and a specific scheduled shift, and visible to the home and the agency at the same moment.

2 Approved

DIRECTOR OF CARE · SAME DAY

The home sees scheduled against actual for every shift. A late start or early finish is visible immediately, not at month end. One tap approves the record; every correction is logged with who made it and when.

3 Verified

INVOICE · ALREADY MATCHED

The agency drafts its invoice from the approved records — it cannot add hours that were not clocked. Rates, overtime and statutory premiums come from the agreed rate card, and only an approved invoice receives a number and reaches accounts payable.

Rounding disappears

A 7 h 20 min shift is billed as 7 h 20 min, every shift, every agency, every month.

Disputes lose their cause

A short shift is short on the invoice. There is nothing to argue about after the fact.

Reconciliation in minutes

The hours and the invoice are the same record. Review replaces days of spreadsheet work.
